

TASK 7

If one data type is assigned to 'a' variable and then a different data type value is assigned to 'a' variable again, it will change the value and give the latest change when asked.

This is because of one feature of python which is imperative. Python is imperative and thus any variable which is assigned a value can be updated ahead in the program without any error.